CITROCARBONATE

A palatable antacid which reduces gastric hyperacidity partly by neutralization and partly by buffering of acid

CITROCARBONATE functions as a systemic alkalizer and mineral nutrient. It supplies the four essential body bases: Sodium, Magnesium, Potassium and Calcium, in approximately the same proportion as they are found in the blood.

CITROCARBONATE is an efficient alkaline diuretic. The organic salts are rapidly absorbed and oxidized and thus contribute base and bicarbonate to the blood stream.

Indications: As an antacid, as a fever mixture, to alkalize the urine, as an aid in water therapy.

Dosage: 1 to 2 teaspoonfuls in a full glass of cold water as indicated.

Supplied in bottles of 4 and 8 ounces.

"I CANNOT SLEEP, DOCTOR!"

Every doctor numbers among his patients many whose chief concern and main reason for seeking advice is loss of sleep. This loss is often less real than the patient supposes. Several hours are spent in sleep, yet the patient complains of feeling tired, unfresh and incapable of doing a good day's work. What is required is something which will lessen the gap between the states of wakefulness and of being sound asleep and which will enable the patient to awake feeling rested, refreshed and energised.

In practice Horlicks proves most effective in producing sound and restful sleep. It adequately buffers the CO_2 content of the blood, neutralises gastric acidity and promotes gastric comfort, thus helping to bring about the mental and physical relaxation so essential for sound sleep.

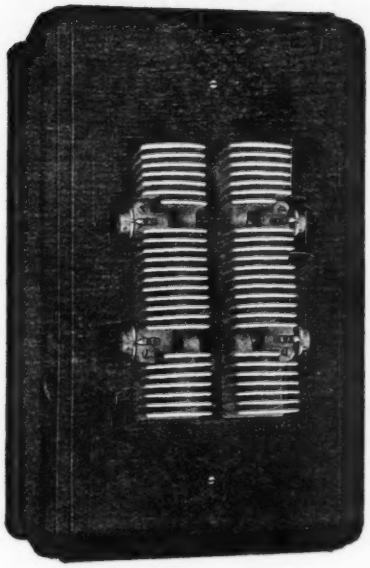
Introducing — The G-E Model "C" Electrosurgical Unit



NEW from circuit to results; packed with inherent advantages, the G-E Model "C" Unit has been built to enhance the benefits of electrosurgery. This is its introduction to the medical profession.

So complete and refined is the method of control that the surgeon may have at the electrode tip just the quality and quantity of high-frequency current desired for the work at hand, whether it be the delicate coagulation of some growth or transurethral prostatic resection.

Factory-adjusted self-compensating gaps of an entirely new type are an exclusive feature of outstanding importance. They assure an unfailing supply of smooth current for cutting, desiccating, or coagulating. So closely calculated have been the factors of heat expansion and so nicely engineered the gaps, that even long continued operation will not cause a change in the spacings. You will appreciate that this feature spells real dependability.

From the beautiful modern case to the smallest integral part of the unit there is excellence of manufacture, soundness of design, and assurance of long, satisfactory, economical life. There are many other advantages that would be of interest to you, such as, for instance, the reasonable price.

Send for descriptive catalogue:

You will want to study this book, for not only does it tell the complete story of the G-E Model "C" Electrosurgical Unit, but it also reprints authoritative information regarding electrosurgery. We would appreciate your addressing your request for a copy to Department A.

DEXTROSOL (pure d-glucose, identical with the sugar of the blood).

"No other sugar found in nature or produced in the laboratory can be utilised by the blood or tissues in any other form than dextrose . . . . . "

This testimony by Dr. I. Newton Kugelmass, M.D., only confirms the knowledge possessed by every physician. But it is not so widely known that the purest form of dextrose (d-glucose)—so pure in fact, that it can be administered in any one of the ways known to medical science—is "DEXTROSOL".
